Rebutelphone call to WFO, 3/10/77.

On 3/10/77, [REDACTED] to Congressman LAWRENCE P. MC DONALD, 7th District of Georgia, Room 504 Cannon Building furnished the following information:

On 3/8/77, at approximately 11:45 a.m., MC DONALD's office received a telephone call from an individual identifying himself as [REDACTED] and asking to speak to MC DONALD, who was not in the office at the time. [REDACTED] left a return telephone number of [REDACTED].

At 4:30 p.m. on the same date, MC DONALD telephonically contacted [REDACTED] at the above telephone number and [REDACTED] began talking about right wing literature by WILLIAM YOCHE and the book, Myth of 6,000.
[REDACTED] asked if the Congressman knew of the Bill of Grievances. [REDACTED] told the Congressman to read the book and he would understand the problem. This was assumed by the Congressman to be anti-semitic. [REDACTED] said the problem could be cured by 2,000 people getting together and burying them, and they would like the Congressman to lead them, whereupon, Congressman MC DONALD hung up the telephone.
